FCC RELEASES INTERNATIONAL POINTS LIST

The FCC has released a report titled International Points Used for FCC Reporting Purposes, prepared by the Common Carrier Bureau's Industry Analysis Division.

The report lists international points that are part of the global telecommunications market and provides country codes for reporting international traffic data pursuant to Section 43.61 of the Commission's rules. Facilities based carriers that provide international service must file international traffic data on a country by country basis. Carriers must use the country codes contained in International Points in order to prepare computer disks containing their traffic data. International traffic data for 1993 will be filed by July 31, 1994.

The tables released today replace tables used to file 1991 and 1992 international traffic data. The new tables change the reporting codes for Guantanamo, the Panama Canal Zone, the Marshall Islands, and Micronesia. In addition, carriers are now directed to separate data for the former Soviet republics, the former Yugoslav republics, and for the Czech Republic and Slovakia.

The report and its underlying data are available for reference in the Industry Analysis Division's Public Reference Room, Common Carrier Bureau, 1250 23rd Street, N.W., Plaza Level. Copies of the report may be purchased by calling International Transcription Services (ITS) at (202) 857-3800. The report can also be downloaded from the FCC-State Link computer bulletin board at (202) 632-1361.

International Points Used for FCC Reporting Purposes

A. Introduction

This publication lists international points that are part of the global telecommunications market and provides country codes for reporting international traffic data pursuant to Section 43.61 of the Commission's rules. Most of these points shown in this publication are independent countries. Some points are not independent countries, but are listed because they have limited sovereignty or are commonly identified as separate places. For example, the list includes Scotland, Great Britain (which includes Scotland), and the United Kingdom (which includes Great Britain). Traffic statistics will be published for the United Kingdom, but some carriers may find it easier to report data for constituent parts.

Some points are listed because they are served by distinct telecommunications facilities. For example, Hawaii and Alaska are listed separately from the conterminous United States. Hawaii and Alaska represent distinct geographic markets. The list also includes most United States territories and possessions.

A few of the listed points may have no telephone service at the present time, but may have service in the future. Most of the points listed, however, can be accessed directly from the United States.

The tables provide three types of FCC reporting codes for each international point. The first reporting code is the Region Code. International points have been assigned to one of ten world regions. The region groupings are based on general market distinctions, and may not be consistent with other geographic compendiums. For example, all points of the former Soviet Union are included in Eastern Europe. It is possible that some former Soviet republics will become more closely associated with the Middle East or Asia.

The second FCC reporting code is the Country Code. United States points have country codes between 1000 and 1999. Foreign points have country codes between 1 and 999. All identified international points have been assigned distinct country codes. Some points are associated with the United States, but are classified by the U.S. Department of State as international points. The Federated States of Micronesia entered into a Compact of Free Association with the United States on November 3, 1986, but is not considered to be United States territory.

Palau is a United Nations trust territory administered by the United States. The United States leases the Guantanamo Bay naval base and the Panama Canal Zone from foreign governments. These points are considered to be foreign points for the purpose of reporting international traffic statistics.

The third type of FCC reporting code is the Summary Code, which is shown for some but not all points. Summary codes are shown if the traffic for one international point will be consolidated with traffic for some other point. The summary code is the country code of the country with which traffic will be grouped. Carriers can consolidate data before filing, or may file data for each point. For example, the summary codes indicate that traffic to the Guantanamo Bay naval base and the Panama Canal Zone will be consolidated with Cuba and Panama, respectively.

The country codes for individual points should not change over time, but summary codes will change to accommodate political and market changes. For example, traffic reported for the USSR using country code 329 will be summarized with traffic reported for Russia -- country code 257.

The tables also show the International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee (CCITT) dialing plan code for most international points. These codes are used to facilitate direct dialing between international points. Many points share the same CCITT code. For example, the United States, Canada, many U.S. possessions, and many Caribbean countries share dialing code 1. A regional dialing plan based on area codes is used to route traffic with country dialing code 1. A few points do not have CCITT dialing plan codes. It is not possible to directly dial international calls to these points. Some points may be covered by a CCITT dialing plan code, but may lack facilities. Other points, such as Cuba and Pitcairn, cannot be directly dialed from the United States.

The report also shows two standardized government codes for international points. The first is the Federal Information Processing Standard (FIPS) 10-3, published by the National Institute of Standards and Technology. FIPS 10-3 is intended to facilitate the interexchange of international data between government agencies. FIPS 10-3 provides two letter codes for the basic geopolitical entities of the world. A two character sub-code is provided for principal divisions of countries. These sub-codes are not shown in the attached tables. The Department of State Office of the Geographer governs changes to the FIPS 10-3 codes. The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) periodically publishes updates.

The International Organization for Standards (ISO) also publishes standardized country codes in ISO 3166. These codes are used to facilitate the exchange of data between countries. The ISO two letter and three letter codes, with very minor revisions, are incorporated in FIPS 104, also available through NIST. These codes are not shown in the attached tables.

Many government agencies maintain their own specialized coding schemes for classifying countries. The Bureau of the Census publishes a set of codes in Schedule C of the Guide to Foreign Trade Statistics, 1992 edition. The country listing is similar to the ISO standard, and Census can provide data using either code structure. The Census Schedule C codes are used to report international trade statistics. Points with the same code are consolidated for the purposes of compiling trade statistics. The Census Schedule C codes are shown in the attached tables.

The international points are shown in five tables. The first table lists the points in alphabetic order. The second table lists the points by region of the world. The third table lists the points by country code. The fourth table groups international points whose data may be consolidated for reporting purposes. The fifth table lists the countries for which the FCC will publish traffic statistics. Resale carriers may use a copy of Table 5 to check off countries that they actually served in the reporting year. Resale carriers will file separate lists of points served for each service that they provide and for each U.S. point that they serve. Contact the Industry Analysis Division (202) 632-0745 regarding points not listed in the tables.

B. Changes in the tables.

International Points was first published in July 1992. The April 1994 edition revises four country codes. Code 126 replaces code 1126 for Guantanamo. Code 236 replaces code 1236 for the Panama Canal Zone. Code 188 replaces code 1188 for the Marshall Islands. Code 195 replaces code 1195 for Micronesia. 1000 level codes are reserved for U.S. points. Traffic reported using the old country codes will be translated to the correct country code. This edition also adds French Southern and Antarctic Lands -- country code 354.

The April 1994 edition of International Points changes reporting for several eastern european countries. Through 1992, the FCC aggregated traffic data for the former Soviet Union. Carriers must now separate traffic for Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Estonia, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, and Uzbekistan. Any traffic reported to country code 329 - USSR will be translated to country 257 - Russia. This translation was selected because Moscow, the capital of the former USSR, is located in Russia.

Carriers must now separate traffic for the Czech Republic and Slovakia. Any traffic reported to country code 80 - Czechoslovakia will be translated to country 384 - Czech Republic. This translation was selected because Prague, the capital of the former Czechoslovakia, is located in the Czech Republic.

Finally, it is the view of the State Department Office of Geographer that the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia has dissolved and no successor state represents its continuation. Carriers must separate traffic for Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Macedonia, Serbia, and Slovenia. Traffic for Montenegro may be consolidated with traffic for Serbia. Traffic reported to country code 346 - Yugoslavia will be consolidated with traffic to Serbia. This translation was selected because Belgrade, the capital of the former Yugoslavia, is located in Serbia.
