LONG DISTANCE CARRIER CODE ASSIGNMENTS

This report contains information on carrier identification codes (CICs) and other telecommunications numbering resources. The information in this report is used within the telephone industry and by users of telephone services for a variety of purposes. CICs are used within the telephone industry to, among other things, identify particular long distance carriers and other access customers in order to bill and route traffic to them. As part of carrier access codes, CICs are also used by customers to reach alternative carriers, such as "dial-around" long distance providers.

The separate codes assigned to providers of 500 and 900 services are used by local telephone companies to direct calls to the service provider. Both residential and business customers frequently seek information from the Commission about these codes to identify particular service providers.

Manufacturers require information on numbering resources to design and produce telecommunications equipment efficiently. Vendors of equipment frequently seek information on the growth of numbering resources to estimate potential demand. Major corporations and government agencies that operate their own telecommunications networks need information on numbering resources to efficiently interconnect their networks with the public switched network.

More generally, the evolution of numbering resources provides insight into the development of competition in the long distance market. This report presents brief background information on the administration of numbering resources and then summarizes the information specifically related to carrier identification codes, 500 service, 555 line number assignments, 800 and 888 service, and 900 service.

Numbering Resources Administration

The North American Numbering Plan (NANP) is the basic format for telephone numbers in the United States (including Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands), Canada, Bermuda and the following Caribbean countries: Anguilla, Antigua, Bahamas, Barbados, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Grenada, Jamaica, Montserrat, St. Kitts & Nevis, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Turks & Caicos Islands, and Trinidad & Tobago. Each telephone number within the NANP is a unique ten-digit number that consists of three parts. The first is a three-digit code -- the Numbering Plan Area or "NPA" code, which usually identifies a specific geographic area and is usually simply called an "area code". In other cases, the first three digits provide caller access to unique services (e.g., 500, 800, 888, and 900 service). The last two parts of each ten-digit number are a three-digit central office code and a four-digit line number. Together, these seven digits usually make up an ordinary local telephone number. In some cases, such as 500 and 900 service, the office code has special uses other than identifying the geographic location of a central office. In the following discussion, the three-digit central office code is sometimes referred to as the "office code" or the "NXX" code.

Section 251 (e)(1) of the Telecommunications Act of 1996, which amends the Communications Act of 1934, requires that the Federal Communications Commission "create or designate one or more impartial entities to administer telecommunications numbering and to make such numbers available on an equitable basis." Section 251(e)(1) also clarifies that the FCC has "exclusive jurisdiction over those portions of the North American Numbering Plan that pertain to the United States . . . [but does not] preclude the Commission from delegating to State commissions or other entities all or any portion of such jurisdiction." The Network Services Division of the Commission's Common Carrier Bureau oversees numbering resource matters.

The NANP was introduced by AT&T in 1947. AT&T administered the NPA codes centrally, and the local exchange carriers administered the NXX codes and line numbers. After the AT&T divestiture in 1984, Bell Communications Research (Bellcore) assumed the centralized number administration functions.

On July 13, 1995, the Commission adopted a new model for administration of the NANP, announcing its intention to establish the North American Numbering Council (NANC), a federal advisory committee.<sup>1</sup> The NANC will, among other tasks, advise the Commission and other NANP governments on numbering issues (such as local number portability implementation), recommend selection of and guide an impartial NANP Administrator, and conduct initial resolution of certain numbering disputes. The NANP Administrator selected by the NANC will process number resource applications and maintain administrative numbering databases. Operational details and additional activities of the NANP Administrator are to be determined by the NANC. Additional information about the NANC is available from the Commission's internet site at (<http://www.fcc.gov/ccb/Nanc>).

Carrier Identification Codes

CICs are numeric codes that, as originally devised, enabled local exchange carriers (LECs), as providers of interexchange access services, to identify access customers in order to bill and route traffic to such customers.<sup>2</sup> Bellcore, as the current NANP Administrator, assigns these codes using guidelines developed by the Industry Carriers Compatibility Forum (ICCF), under the auspices of the Carrier Liaison Committee (CLC) which is sponsored by the Alliance for Telecommunications Solutions (ATIS), an industry forum. Currently, the Industry Numbering <sup>2</sup> Access providers are typically local exchange carriers that provide access customers with circuits that interconnect to the local carrier's public switched telephone network. Access customers include interexchange carriers, wireless carriers, competitive access providers, and large corporate users. Commission rules require that "interstate access services should be made available on a non-discriminatory basis and, as far as possible, without distinction between end user and IC [interexchange carrier] customers." Petition of First Data Resources, Inc., Regarding the Availability of Feature Group B Access Service to End Users, Memorandum Opinion and Order, 1986 WL 291786, (1986), released May 28, 1986 (First Data Resources Order) at para. 13.

Committee (INC), a subcommittee of the ICCF, develops these guidelines. The most recent version of these guidelines was issued in September 1996.<sup>3</sup>

Currently, CICs are used for purposes beyond those for which they were originally designed. CICs facilitate competition by enabling callers to use the services of any number of telecommunications service providers. For example, they enable callers to reach any carrier (presubscribed or otherwise) from any telephone, by dialing a carrier access code that includes a CIC.

The number of firms seeking and obtaining CICs provides the most useful information available on the entry of new firms into the long distance market. This is particularly the case for years prior to 1986, when the Commission decided that interstate access services should be made available on a non-discriminatory basis to end users as well as to interexchange carriers (IXCs).<sup>4</sup> In addition, the CIC information is current: firms acquiring CICs for the first time are reported within 30 days.

An IXC or other access customer must have a CIC to purchase Feature Group D or Feature Group B interconnection access from a local telephone company.<sup>5</sup> Feature Group D, which allows a customer of an IXC to place calls on a "1-plus" basis, is the "equal access" capability deployed by the Bell telephone companies following their divestiture from AT&T.<sup>6</sup> Feature Group B differs somewhat from Feature Group D in that an IXC's customer must first dial 950 and then the four-digit CIC to place a call. The total number of CICs assigned thus reflects the number of firms seeking high-quality interconnection access arrangements with local telephone companies.

The growth in the number of CICs over time is shown in Table 1. As of March 31, 1997, 882 Feature Group B codes and 1,395 Feature Group D codes had been assigned. The firms holding Feature Group B codes are listed in Tables 2 and 3; those with Feature Group D codes are listed in Tables 4 and 5.

A number of firms that are not assigned a CIC may also offer long distance telecommunications services for sale. Typically, these firms resell the services provided by others. No accurate count of the number of these carriers is available. Other firms engaged in long distance

<sup>5</sup> There are other interconnection access arrangements, not discussed in detail in this report, that do not require a CIC.

<sup>6</sup> There currently exists a transition period concerning the conversion of Feature Group D codes from three-digits to four-digits. This period will end January 1, 1998. With three-digit codes, customers are able to dial 10XXX where XXX is the three-digit CIC. With the conversion of codes from three-digits to four-digits, customers will dial 101XXXX where XXXX is the four-digit CIC code.

telecommunications are not counted because they use special access or engage in selling transmission capacity to carriers and therefore do not need to acquire a CIC number.

As competition has developed, CICs, which initially were two digits in length, have been expanded to three and to four digits to assure there are enough CICs to meet the demand for them.<sup>7</sup> As with area code changes, changing the number of digits in CICs requires advance planning and may require a transition period. Carriers may have to reprogram and upgrade network switches. Callers must be educated about the changes, equipment owners may need to reprogram and upgrade PBS switches, and manufacturers may need to develop new software and hardware for equipment owners and carriers. The Network Services Division of the Commission's Common Carrier Bureau addresses these matters.

500 Service

In 1993, a new set of codes for personal communications services was established.<sup>8</sup> Area code 500 was designated for this purpose. One of the potential uses for 500 codes is that an individual or business can keep the same phone number (NXX-XXXX) if it moves from its central office code area (NXX), even to another state. Five hundred codes would thus allow non-geographic numbering.

Companies seeking to offer 500 service receive office codes, each of which can be used for 10,000 telephone numbers.<sup>9</sup> All 500 calls that are dialed as 1-500-550-XXXX are routed to MCI, regardless of the last four digits dialed. Similarly, calls that are dialed as 1-500-288-XXXX are routed to AT&T. Because each of 1,000 office codes can be associated with 10,000 line numbers, there are theoretically 10,000,000 potential 500 numbers. As a practical matter, however, fewer than 80% of these potential numbers are usable. Telephone numbers that begin with a 1 or 0, for example, are not used.

Table 6 is a "balance sheet" for the assignment of 500 codes and the types of companies to which the codes are assigned. Table 7 shows the assignment of codes by quarter. The first 500 codes

<sup>7</sup> The history of CIC expansion is outlined in the publication, Long Distance Carriers and Code Assignments, May 22, 1995, mimeo #53905.

<sup>8</sup> The Industry Carriers Compatibility Forum (ICCF), an organization that develops guidelines of number administration, has defined Personal Communication Services as "a set of capabilities that allows some combination of personal mobility, terminal mobility and service profile management. It enables each personal communication service user to participate in a user-defined set of subscribed services, and initiate and/or receive calls on the basis of some combination of a personal number, terminal number, and a service profile across multiple networks at any terminal, fixed or mobile, irrespective of geographic location." Personal Communications Services (PCS) N100 NXX Code Assignment Guidelines, ICCF 93-1130-011, S.I.I. (Nov. 17, 1993). We note that PCS in the context of 500 service is distinct from the term PCS that refers to certain types of commercial mobile radio service.

<sup>9</sup> The possible combinations of line number digits, from 0000 to 9999, yield 10,000 possible numbers for each office code.

were assigned August 10, 1994. As of March 31, 1997, 520 codes had been assigned. Tables 8 and 9 list the assignment of 500 office codes service providers within area code 500.

555 Line Numbers

The assignment of 555 line numbers differs from that of 500 codes in that 555 represents the office code (NXX) and remains a constant. The numbers being assigned are the line numbers--the last four digits of a seven-digit number telephone number. A 555 line number that has been in use many years is 555-1212, which is used for directory assistance. This particular 555 number will continue to be used for that purpose. Non-communications companies as well as communications companies can obtain line number assignments for 555 line numbers. Like the telephone number for directory assistance, these numbers are to be used for informational purposes.

The 555 line numbers are being assigned on a national or regional basis. A national 555 number is assigned to an entity for use in most or all of the area codes in the United States, whereas a regional 555 number is assigned to an entity for use in a specific geographic area (less than 30% of the area codes or states or provinces).<sup>10</sup> Thus, a regional 555 number may be assigned to more than one entity if it is to be used in different geographic regions. A national number cannot be assigned to more than one entity.

Table 10 is a "balance sheet" containing information on the assignment of 555 line numbers. Table 11 tracks the assignment of 555 line numbers. The first 555 line numbers were assigned on May 12, 1994. As of March 31, 1997, 2,535 line numbers (i.e. 555-XXXX) had been assigned. Tables 12 and 13 show the assignment of telephone numbers with 555 as the first three digits.

800 and 888 Service

Toll-free 800 and 888 are services for which the called party pays for the call. Prior to 1993, toll-free 800 calls were routed in a manner similar to that being used for 500 and 900 calls, with the NXX office code indicating the long distance carrier handling the call. Information is available (in the same format and sequence as the tables displaying 900 codes) from the FCC indicating the status of the 800 market as of April 30, 1993; this is the last available data under the old 800 routing system.<sup>11</sup>

On May 1, 1993, procedures for routing 800 calls were changed. The first three digits of 800 calls no longer indicate the carrier handling the call. The new system enables customers to change long distance carriers while still retaining the same 800 number. This system of "portability" relies on a large data base maintained by Database Service Management, Inc. (DSMI), which is a subsidiary of Bellcore. During the two years since 800 portability was implemented, the number of working 800 telephone numbers is reported to have tripled. The growth of 800 telephone numbers is shown in Table 14. This growth has caused the near exhaust of 800 numbers. In March 1996, the 888 code was added to support the increase in demand for toll-free numbers (codes were first assigned in February 1996). The 888 code has nearly 8 million combinations. Table 15 shows the growth of 888 telephone numbers starting in 1996.

900 Service

900 service is a service for which the calling party is charged for the call at rates different from those charged for ordinary long distance calls. A common use is the provision of information-type services such as sports scores, music industry updates, stock quotes, and weather forecasts. Some companies use 900 numbers for software support -- with callers, in effect, paying a per-minute consulting fee.

The provision of 900 service typically involves two parties: a carrier to handle the transmission and an entertainment or information provider. The information provider is not regulated by the FCC but is regulated by the Federal Trade Commission with respect to advertising, billing 900 services, and the message preamble. The carrier that transmits a 900 call usually handles the billing and collection as well. Because billing and collection is nonregulated, charges for this activity are usually covered by contract. The carrier typically charges both a per-minute fee for the actual transmission of the message plus a share of the gross receipts for handling the billing and collection.

The assignment of 900 codes is similar in many respects to the assignment and use of 500 codes discussed above. For example, the assignment of each NXX code represents 10,000 individual line numbers, and the codes are not transferable among carriers.

Tables 16 through 19 are almost identical in format to the tables presented earlier for 500 service. Table 16 is a "balance sheet" for the assignment of 900 numbers, indicating the number of codes assigned and the types of carriers to which the codes are assigned. Table 17 tracks the assignment of codes to potential competitors in the market for 900 services over time. Tables 18 and 19 provide a list of all assigned 900 codes and the firms holding those codes.

Not all of the 900 codes assigned by Bellcore are in use at any particular time. In some cases, a firm that has acquired a 900 code may not yet have commenced operation. In other cases, firms may have merged or terminated operations and the numbers have not yet been reassigned.
