

I have been an AOL subscriber for several years. During this time, I have been censored many times on the AOL Travel Destination Message boards. As a matter of fact, the manager of the Travel Boards, has gone so far, as to suspend my privileges, for being "disruptive", thereby denying me access to a service for which I am paying, with no recourse, or appeal.

Having written several e-mails, along with two regular "snail" mails to Steve Case regarding the problems I have encountered, I can assure you, that AOL does not care about it's customers, and if the "monopoly", oops, I mean merger goes through, it will be even worse for the users.
