

I am writing out of concern regarding the proposed merger between Time-Warner and AOL. I believe that the merger would have serious negative consequences both on consumer choice (with fewer companies determining internet and cable content) and freedom of speech. Time Warner's Roadrunner Internet service already has policies about restricting political content on members' web pages. Without the pressure of competition, political dissent can be effectively silenced--contrary to the spirit of the first amendment.
amendment.