

I am a current Dish network subscriber and I am in favor of the Dish/DirectTV merger. I am most interested in the availability of local channels. I live only forty miles from where my local stations originate, therefore everyone assumes I will be able to receive signals with an external antenna, but I can't. I think it is unfair to be at the mercy of the one cable company in town just because I would like to see major network TV and local news.