

I am writing in support of the merger of Echostar and Hughes. I believe it will finally give the cable television industry true competition. I have had Dish Network for five years and have been completely satisfied with the quality of service and choices. Digital transmission is the future and satellite delivery is the only way most of the U.S. will ever have access to it. To have the needed capabilities it will take the combined resources of Echostar and Hughes.