

The merger between DirectTV and the Dish Network would create an unfair monopoly of the satellite television medium. The two companies have increased fees significantly over the last weeks in preparation of the merger, and are unfairly squeezing out the possibility of future competitors. This merger would create two television behemoths (Time Warner and DirectTV/Dish) that would control the way all Americans watch television. I urge you to take all necessary steps to prevent this merger and allow free competition between the two companies to drive down monthly television bills and increase consumer choice.
