

I live in a rural area and have been unable to get quality television service since moving here. Cable is expensive and the quality is lacking, and I cannot receive any local stations through the use of antennas. Also, I cannot get internet access because there are no local dial-up numbers and nobody offers broadband access. I have been considering Dish Network or DirectTV for quite some time, but the absence of local networks caused me to be uneasy about purchasing a system. However, this new merger looks like the best thing for rural customers, like myself. I would like to see this merger be approved so that I can benefit the same way as other, larger cities. Thank you for your time.
