

I live in Muncie, IN. I saw last week on the internet that Muncie now has a population of 96,000+ people. It included all zip codes for Muncie listed. Currently, the only broadband internet provider is Comcast and they know they're the only game in town. Their service is not great, but still, they have highly inflated rates.

Muncie is too far from indianapolis to connect to thier broadband, or DSL internet services. I have a huge need, and use the internet for business, and many other community, based projects. Please approve a satellite broadband service that would service more rural areas, such as would be the case in the echostar merger. Thank you.
