

I believe that the proposed merger of directtv and echostar is a mistake for consumers. It would eliminate competition and in some areas it would create a monopoly. It would be far more cost effective to stop this merger before it completes, rather than try to correct the situation after the merger has gone through. I have seen the cost of cable tv rise without competition. That is the reason I bought the satalite receiver.