

Dear Sirs,

I would like you to know that I was terribly misled by the statements that XO communications made as to their financial health when I invested in their company. Now the company feels that it will go in another direction because it is good for them. I do not think that the company should be allowed to go forward virtually giving their assests to the present suitors while leaving the people that got them this far with nothing. Give them the alternative of liquidation and see if they can't find themselves out of their present problems.

Sincerely

Robert Cohen
