

I believe that the XO plan has been formulated to help only one or two stockholders, who happen to be the majority stockholders. It completely disregards all other stockholders. There is at least one bidder for the company who is not currently a major shareholder, so it certainly would seem there is some viability to the company. It is unfair to 'rescue' one or two shareholders at the expense of all others. It was always presented that the company was in a position to continue operations, and not encounter the difficulties which it has.