How does a company tell its shareholders it has sufficient cash until 2003 and 2 weeks later tell its shareholders their stock will now become worthless, while the Directors line their pockets. This is like a mini Enron and as long as these situations continue the small investor cannot trust the business community. We, the small investor, do not need "inside information" just fair and honest reporting so we can make a informed decision on our investments. It is time companies such as XO Communications are made to answer for their practices.
